Life and the Candle

I sit with a single candle burning in my living room. There are many times when I sit quietly and do this simple thing. When I am thinking of the fine friends that life has given to me and the friends life has taken away. I recall simple sounds of laughter or a voice I no longer hear in my daily travels. Then the voice of friend calls out and my mind moves down the road. Sometimes I dream of a better world than the one we dreamed of on those hillsides. There is no denying that we did inhale a lot of smoke. Soft sounds of silence fill the room and I feel gratitude for all those people in our communities who have given most of their lives to everyone. At times it appeared that they had kept so little for themselves that they appeared lost in the shuffle and often times forgotten. Silence. Then the pictures of you, and you, and you, appear with a smile and a friendly glance. Silence. The candle flickers slowly in the dark giving its friendly glow and a quiet reminder that there is light in the darkness. The silence is golden.

Burning slowly, the candle reminds me of a simpler time. Although I am not certain that those times were all that simple. Those were the days that I had to hide who I really am from anyone I came in contact with each day. A familiar memory passes by in the dark room and lights up my mind to silly things we did for fun. We certainly had no problem coming up with ideas to have fun that was not hurtful to anyone. Perhaps it was the safety of friendship that made everything all right during those early days. As my mind wanders, I look toward the candle and find it brings me back to the days when our minds were hidden deep within a dark cave. Some of us wandered out into the light and others stayed frightened of the shadows on the walls. There was no way to explain to them that it was going to be safe as long as we stayed together. Was it a sin to think of the world as one tiny village in all this space? How simple it seemed to work and play together towards making it a better place.

Then the candle flickers higher and the word gratitude comes to mind. That simple process of being grateful for the things that we have in place now. You are not forgotten as you passed this way once and never returned. What did it take to spend a few hours sitting in this room with only the light of a candle?

You are that candle to me and I am forever grateful for spending these few minutes with you.

FYI: News & Notes from the HIV/AIDS Battlefront

"AIDS Conference to Discuss Rapid Pace of Disease in Asia"

Boston Globe Online

The 5th International Conference on AIDS in Asia and the Pacific will begin Sunday in Kuala Lumpur, focusing on how to control the AIDS epidemic in the region. While many of the world's HIV-infected individuals reside in Africa, Asia may be the next area with an explosion of AIDS, with about 7 million people in the Asia-Pacific region now living with HIV or AIDS. The Joint United Nations Program on HIV/AIDS noted that in Asia, HIV is primarily transmitted between heterosexuals and through injected drugs. The conference will also discuss ways to overcome cultural taboos regarding sex and condom use that have hampered HIV prevention efforts.

"Fighting Tuberculosis"

Financial Times

A collaboration between scientists from the United States and Russia is working to design a new biochip technology that will help in identifying particular strains of tuberculosis (TB), with the hope of improving the efficacy of antibiotics. TB takes a long time to treat, and antibiotic-resistant strains have developed as some patients discontinue their medications before the infection is completely eliminated. The biochip is a device that can isolate single strands of genetic material for easy identification. After identifying the particular strain, doctors can decide on which antibiotics would be most efficient in treating the infection.

"Health Department to Discuss HIV-Exposure Notification"

Albuquerque Journal Online

In New Mexico, the state Department of Health was slated to hold on Wednesday a statewide teleconference to discuss the protocol for notifying people they may have been exposed to HIV. Carol Horwitz, an HIV/AIDS planner with the department of health, notes that while the state usually informs the sexual partners of those who test HIV-positive, New Mexico does not require partner notification for HIV. Tim Wolfe, manager of the department's HIV prevention effort, explained that the notification process can include drawing blood to see whether that individual has HIV or referring him or her to a testing site, as well as counseling about the individual's relative risk and prevention measures. Wolfe added that some people become angered because health workers cannot reveal who named them, noting that "there's a general feeling that it can be subject to misuse."

"Net Filters Will Block Safe Sex Information"

Australian Associated Press

In Australia, AIDS educators are worried that new federal guidelines for the Internet could restrict information pertaining to safe sex and sex education. The new laws, which are set to take effect next year, restrict access to violent or sexually explicit material. Victorian AIDS Council peer education officer Kenton Miller noted that the restrictions would also limit safe sex and rape crisis information and could make it difficult for rural residents who do not have easy access to other resources to obtain such data.

"Many Physicians Fail to Recognize Symptoms in HIV-Infected Patients"

Reuters Health Information Services

French researchers performed a cross-sectional survey of 290 HIV-infected patients to compare reported symptoms with the treatments prescribed. The study, published in the October issue of the Journal of Pain and Symptom Management, determined that physicians treating HIV patients need to be better at identifying patients' symptoms. Often, the doctors paid attention only to measurable physical symptoms such as fever or weight loss, granting more attention when the patient became sicker. The scientists also noted poor physician recognition rates for symptoms associated with treatment side effects and for symptoms of treatable conditions, including sleep problems and diarrhea.

"Drug Cuts Amount of Hepatitis B Virus in Blood"

Reuters

Glaxo Wellcome's lamivudine can lower levels of the hepatitis B virus in the blood, according to a new study sponsored by the drug maker. In the study, which appears in the current issue of the New England Journal of Medicine, 52 percent of patients given lamivudine responded to the drug, versus 23 percent of the patients treated with a placebo. Among the 66 patients who were given lamivudine, the level of the virus was undetectable in 44 percent, while the virus was undetectable in only 16 percent of the 71 placebo recipients. Viral levels climbed when the treatment was halted.

"Teen Sex Report Puts Spotlight on Georgia Town"

Washington Times

Tonight's episode of the PBS series "Frontline" will focus on a 1996 syphilis outbreak in which 17 Rockdale County, Georgia teenagers were infected and 250 more received medical treatment. The documentary, which features interviews with teenagers who discuss their sexual behavior, has upset some community leaders and parents. Some of the teenagers report having up to 100 sexual partners or participating in group sex parties. Local leaders are upset about the content, especially after the May shooting in the county, which injured six classmates of T.J. Solomon, the gunman.

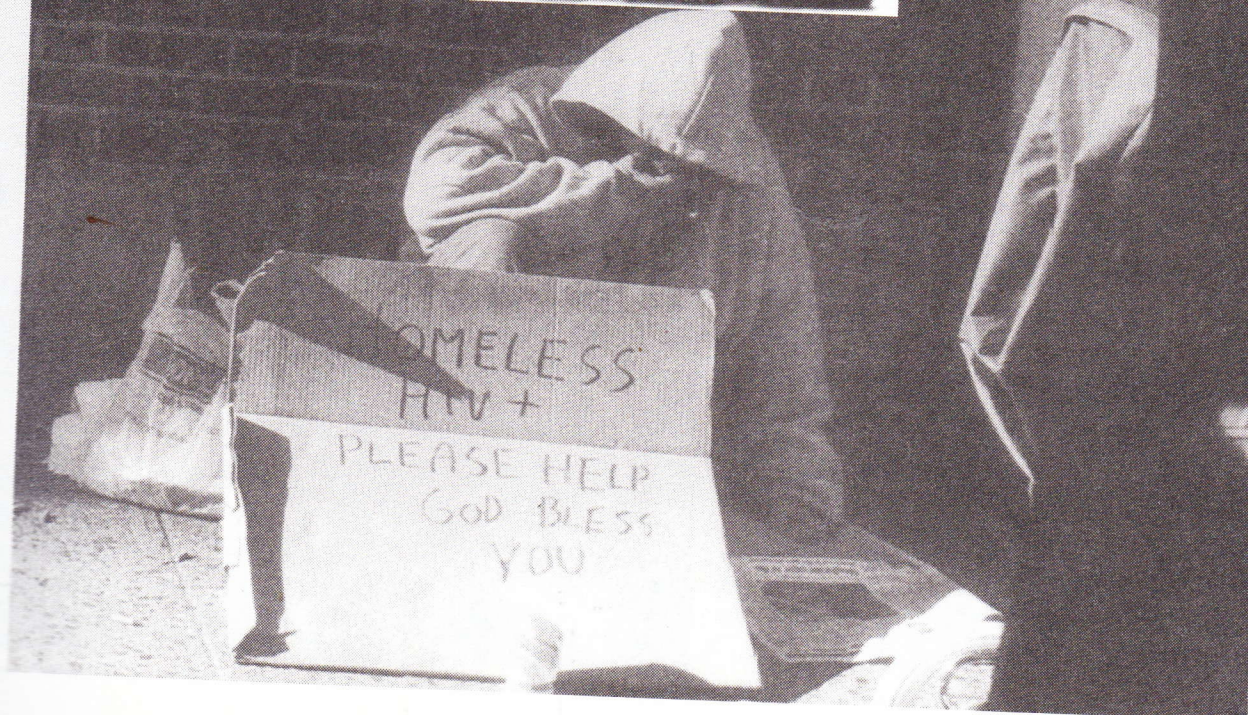

"Ryan White Foundation Is Shutting Down"

Philadelphia Inquirer

The Ryan White Foundation will close this month, the result of decreasing donations. Jeanne White-Ginder, the founder of the organization named for her son, who died nearly a decade ago after contracting HIV through contaminated blood-clotting products, said she now plans to join AIDS Action. There, she will lead a new project that aims to educate young people about HIV and to lobby for more federal funding for AIDS programs.

16th Annual AIDS Benefit NOVEMBER 11th

We still need your help

Thank You

On Saturday, October 16th, 1999, the following businesses opened the doors of their to help raise funds for people living with HIV or AIDS for the Holiday Season. The Garneau Theatre with its showing of Beefcake started the night with a glimpse into our past. Through the night, The Roost, Buddy's Dance Pub, Down Under, Secrets Bar and Grill along with the Hemp Cafe all put efforts into special events and shows. The Other Place in Red Deer also assisted with the raising of funds for this event. In total $2500.00 was raised, all of which will go directly to Living Positive. We at Times 10 give many thanks to all the owners, staff and the many performers who participated throughout the evening. Here on these two pages we can only give you a little bit of the action that took place all evening. Hundreds of people will be very grateful that you took the time to remember them as they live with HIV or AIDS.

We are not finished yet! We have one more item, which will run as a silent auction viewable through the month of November. Mike from the Hemp Cafe was able to obtain a photograph of Wayne Gretzky and have Wayne sign it during his recent visit to Edmonton. The colour photo is of Wayne scoring the goal that broke the Gordie Howe record on goals scored. The back cover tells the story of where to view the photo and when the final auction will take place. All of the proceeds will also go to people living with HIV or AIDS for the holiday season in December, 1999.

Myths

By Laurie Blakeman - Liberal MLA

I firmly believe that you can handle just about anything given enough notice. As baby boomers, we're used to being the generation of change, but there are some old assumptions or myths that we're still buying into.

Myth #1 My life expectancy will be the same as my parents.

Right now, we can expect some of our parents to live to be 90 years of age. We, on the other hand, can expect to live to be 100 plus. That means we're going to have to seriously reconsider the type of services we will demand in our senior years and who exactly will pay for those services.

Myth #2 I will retire at 65 years of age.

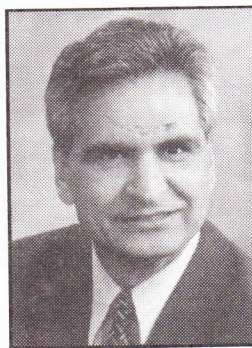

If our life expectancy is increasing, then retiring at the age of 65 means we have to plan on saving enough money to last us for 35 or more years. Is that really possible? More than that, most of us when we retire at 65 will not be the frail seniors that our grandparents were. I mean, consider this: Jane Fonda is 62 years old and no one would dare consider her old or frail. In short, most of us at 65 will still be able to contribute to society and anything less is a gigantic waste of intelligence and talent.

Myth #3 My family will take care of me as I age.

As baby boomers, both men and women participated fully in the workplace. That meant that children were cared for outside of the home. What makes us think that as seniors, when we become ill, we will automatically expect our children to quit their jobs to care for us? More likely than not, they will be looking for non-traditional ways to care for us whether that be home care workers visiting us in our home or having us go to day-cares for seniors.

So what does this all mean for the baby boomers now? Now is the time for us to make the decision about what we want for our future and to start thinking about what services we want and who will pay for them. Let us know what you think by attending the Seniors Forums being held across the province. Or write your Member of the Legislative Assembly and let him or her know what you want. We are the generation of change and we will be changing the face of retirement.

If you would like more information about this or any other issue, please do not hesitate to contact the Constituency office at 10042-116 Street, Edmonton, AB T5K 1V6 Phone: 414-0743, Fax: 414-0772 or e-mail: blakeman@oanet.com

Tories Attempt

Another Dirty Trick

By Raj Pannu - ND MLA

It's been a while since the Legislature was in session – the Tories have a big aversion to public scrutiny – but MLAs will be back on November 17th.

And once again, human rights issues will be at the forefront of political debate. This time around, it's Bill 38 the Constitutional Referendum Amendment Act. Existing legislation requires a provincial referendum to be held on amendments to the constitution.

Bill 38 deals not with constitutional amendments, however, but with a very different issue.

It's part of the government policy on gay and lesbian issues announced in March that before the Notwithstanding Clause is ever used, a referendum will have to be held. One of the catches is the exception to the rule – Bill 38 allows the government to use the Notwithstanding Clause without any referendum in order to restrict the definition of marriage only to heterosexual couples.

While the New Democrats are in favour of giving same-sex couples the right to marry, it's not a hill to die on in this case.

What I find particularly offensive in Bill 38, and what we really take issue with, is the idea that the individual rights of minorities can be subjected to the whims of a bare majority in a referendum. There's a reason why the Charter of Rights and Freedoms was implemented in the first place – to ensure that individual rights of people in minority groups are protected and guaranteed.

Referendums are also expensive. Based on the elections for Alberta's wannabe, wait-in-the-wings Senators, it could cost around $4 million dollars just to run referendum. I also question how democratic a referendum really is.

Complex political debates are rarely a simple 'Yes' or 'No' proposition and the best solutions don't always lie in such a question. And especially when referenda deal with fundamental issues of human rights, the population can be unnecessarily polarized and the debate can become vitriolic and intense.

Instead of expensive, polarizing and divisive referenda, consultation and consensus building can be equally important and democratic, not to mention cheaper.

And while we are opposing Bill 38 as it progresses through the Legislature, Pam Barrett and myself will be pressuring the government at every turn to do what should have been a long time ago – take serious steps to protect make gay and lesbian Albertans fully equal.

More Government Failures

*By Hugh MacDonald
MLA*

The Klein government prides itself on being an excellent manager of government affairs. It frequently applauds itself for efficiency and rapid debt repayment. However, the government fails to realize that there is more to good management than the financial bottom line.

Case in point: the government's treatment of its public service. As any good manager knows, the strength of an organization is its people. Any government intent on being a good manager will treat its teachers, nurses and other public servants with the respect they deserve. So how does the Klein government treat its most valuable asset? On this point it fails miserably.

In 1998/99 the government increased compensation for its deputy ministers (its highest-ranking department managers) by more than 23%. In comparison, the Alberta Union of Public Employees, representing over 18,000 public servants has been offered a 1.0% increase, not even enough to cover the cost of inflation. The double standard is obvious and appalling in almost every government department. For example, the Deputy Minister of Education received a 27.9% increase this year; a raise from $124,868 to $146,701 while teachers received a 4.21% raise. The Deputy Minister of Health received a 21.5% raise, from $132,713 to $161,310 while nurses won a 3.0% increase.

No one is saying that deputy ministers and other managers are not a valuable and necessary part of government – they are; however, the frontline staff is at least equally valuable. It's the social workers with huge caseloads, the nurses with unending line-ups of people in emergency and the teachers in hopelessly overcrowded classroom that have held our system together. They should be recognized and compensated appropriately.

It's time to end the double standard of inflating deputy minister salaries by amounts higher than what some public servants make in a year and then offering teachers, nurses, and others the crumbs left on the table.

Youth, Sexuality And Abstinence

Some questions on what we are not teaching and why?

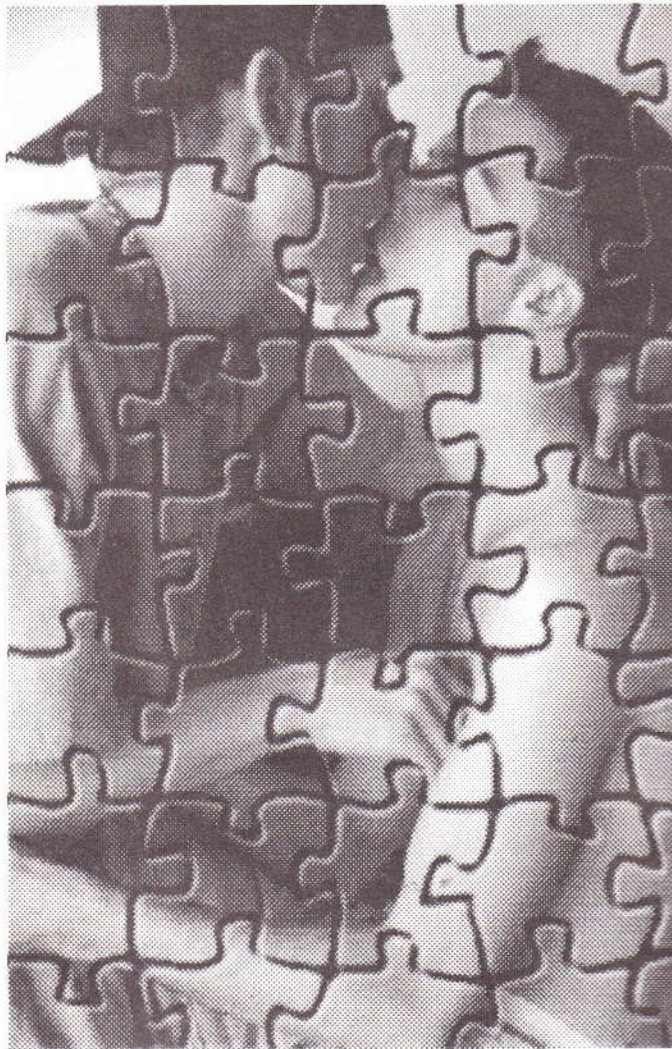

*By Robert Wm. Smith
HIV Edmonton*

At a June workshop on Empowering Youth to Confront HIV/AIDS, attended by representatives of several AIDS Service Organizations from the three Prairie Provinces, a great deal of discussion took place around programming and initiatives aimed at and coordinated by youth. In retrospect, I am conscious of the lack of discussion around abstinence as an alternate HIV prevention strategy. In the majority, discussion about prevention centered on sexual behaviours, intravenous drug use, body art, and steroid use in the youth population.

In recent weeks, I have been questioning the implied meaning of and the principles behind voluntary abstinence from sexual activity. There are many levels of sexual activity; mutually, couples of all sexual orientations participate in a variety of activities that may or may not include insertion. (By insertion I am implying the use of a penis in the performance of sexual intercourse.) Lesbian couples provide another interesting perspective to "going all the way" when male and female, two males? How about mutual masturbation? At what point does a kiss "go to far"? Does abstinence make allowances for the furtive grope of a breast insertion involves either digital, oral or prosthetic. Given this list of factors, is performing oral sex considered abstinence? Is anal intercourse between a and/or genitals?

Even I, when presenting to a group, either youth or adult, don't give abstinence the deliberation it deserves.

I have always looked at abstinence as being a propaganda message of the fundamentalist and failed to see some of the other issues that help form the principles guiding abstinence. We as Health Promoters have to include room for actually feeling good about one's self, as well as the variety of issues around self esteem, acceptance, and sociability of youth and viewing sexual behaviour as a spiritually based physical experience. By spiritually, I refer to the principle that one's body is the home of one's spirit, one's self. Some view the realm of sexual expression as the ultimate gift of love and abstain from all levels of sexual activity. For some in the pursuit of a more enhanced spiritual identity, sexual activity is often seen as a distraction (others view it as a vehicle to other spiritual experiences) and refrain as a means of developing greater cognitive and intuitive abilities.

Another concern is the overwhelming influence of the media, television, cinema, stage, music, and the Internet on definitions and analysis of sexual health and behaviours. The use of "sex" to promote products and music, entertain in television and cinema and to exploit in cyberspace is a formidable philosophical challenge to those who have made a commitment to remain celibate.

We, as a society, do not openly discuss the principles of abstinence from sexual activity; we don't provide adequate information allowing youth to make informed choices about the level of their sexual activities and the level of comfort in their sexual activity. We are allowing the external influence of commercialized sexuality to provide our children with the tools to identify as sexual beings; and those tools do not remotely consider principles of self and/or spiritual identity. HIV/AIDS campaigns are notorious for utilizing sub/ explicit sexual activity between "ideal bodies" as a means of promoting safer sex activities.

And this brings me back to Calgary. It is important that all involved in the process of Empowering Youth to Confront HIV/AIDS reflect on how we reverse the discussion around abstinence as an alternative to sexual activity and as a means of prevention of the spread of HIV and other STDs. The message should avoid a judgmental approach while exploring the quality of relationships both within and outside of the sexual experience.

As stated above, there is a consensus that all initiatives aimed at youth should have the direct involvement of youth at the inception, development and coordination levels. HIV Edmonton is very interested in forming a strategy and planning committee around the development and implementation of programming targeting youth in the areas of sexual behaviours, intravenous drug use, body art, steroid use and abstinence. We are also keen on having that committee composed primarily of youth from as diverse a population base as is realistic. If you or anyone you know in the youth population is interested in participating in the exploring of programming possibilities and the overseeing of initiatives designed by that committee, please contact Robert Smith at HIV Edmonton, 488-5742.

What is the Ross Armstrong Memorial Trust Fund?

The fund was started on July 1, 1986 in memory of Ross Armstrong, the first person in Edmonton to become a public spokesperson on HIV / AIDS related concerns.

Ross died in Toronto, on Canada Day, 1986 of complications due to HIV diseases. The fund was developed to provide HIV positive individuals with a gift of money. It was felt by Mr. Armstrong that life enhancement gifts to people living with HIV was something of importance and the committee has always tried to reflect his wishes.

A working committee was made up of representatives of both HIV Edmonton and Living Positive in the fall of 1996 to address the issues of too many requests, not enough money and the difficult decisions involved with allocating funds. It was acknowledged during these meetings that dispensing cash alone was not adequately dealing with the issue of enhancing the quality of life of an HIV positive individual. It was a temporary Band-Aid solution at best for the fund could never keep up with the number of requests it was receiving and could not consistently keep the program going as the fund was always running out of money.

In June of 1998, the Ross Armstrong Trust Fund Committee decided to stop accepting request for "cash" and moved towards implementing a Health Promotion / Life Enhancement Program. In September of 1999 we started distributing multivitamins to people living with HIV. Registration forms for these, and any future programs, are available at the offices of HIV Edmonton, Living Positive, Feather of Hope, clinics such as U of A, STD, Kindred House, Streetworks, etc. They must be completely filled out and then submitted to either HIV Edmonton or Living Positive for verification of positive status. Multivitamins are now available every 2nd and 4th Tuesday of the month between 4-7 p.m. at the office of HIV Edmonton.

This year the fund is also sponsoring Christmas Hampers for people living with HIV and their partners/families. These hampers will include life enhancement items such as movie passes, gift/food certificates, etc. to add some cheer to the Holiday Season and the New Year.

People who are HIV positive and registered with the fund are asked to write a letter requesting a hamper before NOVEMBER 30, 1999.

No requests will be considered after this date. In this letter, it's important to let the committee know the total number within your family, including children. Please address letters to the ROSS ARMSTRONG TRUST FUND COMMITTEE and send them or drop them off at either the office of HIV Edmonton or Living Positive. All registrations and letters will be held in the strictest confidence.

The Ross Armstrong Trust Fund is supported solely through the memberships of HIV Edmonton, Living Positive, and donations made directly to the fund at this time. We would like to continue providing health promotion and life enhancement to people living with HIV in the New Year and the committee welcomes any donations to help us with the Christmas Hampers and to continue and expand the programs we can offer in the future.

Monetary donations can be made to the ROSS ARMSTRONG TRUST FUND c/o HIV EDMONTON, #600, 10242 105 Street, Edmonton, AB. T5J 3L5. Phone (780)488-5742. All donations are eligible for a tax receipt from HIV Edmonton if requested.

"Y2K" ONE MORE TIME!

By Michael Phair -
Edmonton City Councillor

"Y2K, the Millennium, Year 2000"—these are all terms guaranteed to make us turn off! The end of this year has been so hyped that it comes close to causing nausea. However, I am going to venture 'one more time' into the mine field of Y2K!

Nearly a year ago after much deliberation the City of Edmonton wisely decided that instead of concentrating only on Y2K, it would be best to focus on preparing citizens for any unexpected emergency. Many Edmontonians vividly remember the tornado that struck northeast Edmonton and most of us watched eastern Canadian cities have to respond to massive ice storms. Therefore the City has gone about the business of planning for any large emergency or disaster that might affect residents at any time.

It has been, of course, extremely important that the City review all of its computer systems to ensure they will experience no problems when the date clicks to 2000. Such work has led to the entire replacement of the system that activates and controls the LRT as it was not Y2K compliant and the system could not be fixed. Even more important is the extensive review that has been done on the communication and dispatch systems for ambulance, fire and police services.

Obviously these systems are key to responding to emergencies and must be there for people who have a serious medical, police or fire emergency.

Besides the preparedness that is being undertaken by the City, it is really important that citizens do some very simple things to make sure that they are ready for anything that might happen unexpectedly and that people can be as self-reliant as possible. The City is suggesting that you think moderately—what would you need to manage for up to 3 days on your own? Are there medications that you need? How about a little cash? Tinned food, packaged cereals, bottled water and juices are easy to have around. (Sorry—I know that most of us who are sophisticated would prefer pate and artichoke hearts!) Because of our climate an extra blanket and warm gloves and boots could be useful and don't forget such things as candles, matches and a flashlight. If you have a pet, other than your partner, make sure you have extra pet food. In many circumstances having a battery operated radio will be useful to help you keep informed.

It is just common sense to plan ahead for unexpected emergencies. Y2K has given the City a good excuse to update and improve its emergency plans. Edmonton is now in a good place to deal with any natural or man-made emergency like a flood, severe blizzard or power blackout. A little planning and preparation on every Time.10 reader's part will mean that you too will be ready for the unexpected.

As New Year's Eve turns into 2000, I expect to be doing what I have done for the last number of years. I will be joining many of you and thousands of other Edmontonians at Churchill Square yelling, singing and enjoying the fireworks of the First Night Festival—and I will not be worried because I will be ready if anything unexpected happens!

FINDING YOUR WAY

Do you ever feel lost? You think your fetish is absurd, crazy or people will think you are strange. I did.. people will think I am weird if I tell them I like bondage, leather, erotic sex, knife play or many of the other things I indulge in. I met someone one day in a chat room and by chance she lived in Edmonton. We met and she told me about the community that exists for all. Its safe, sane and consensual. There is Lashes, EOS, Northern Chaps, B.E.A.R.S. and now NLA:E. Each group offers support, education and a comfort zone to get know people of like minded ideas. We are not strange, weird, sick or perverted. We are open-minded, accepting, and non-judgmental of others likes and opinions. We welcome those who want a safe environment to learn, make friends and play. Leather is what you want it to be - it is what you believe it to be. There are books on leather history, the lifestyle, beliefs and leather sex. What you choose is your decision. You aren't wrong - you aren't alone. There is support out there, groups that will teach, and friends that will understand you.

Each issue of Living in Leather is going to feature a Lesson in Leather.

Dungeon Etiquette

At some point you will have your experience at your first play party.

Basic common sense plus respect will help you enjoy this experience.

1. Dungeon Monitors

2. If you have questions about a scene wait until it is completed and aftercare has occurred.
3. Be aware of getting in the crossfire of floggers and whips. Give people space.
4. As a standard rule there is NO sex, drugs or alcohol.
5. No photography or video cameras are allowed. You can be assured no one is secretly taping you.
6. Ensure you have safe words and have negotiated with a TOP or bottom the rules and safety. If you have medical concerns NOW is the time to talk. State your limitations. Be honest.

7. If watching - be respectful and courteous. Don't touch things that aren't yours.
8. Cleanliness is strictly enforced.
9. If bloodsports, wax or fire is part of your entertainment ask the DM if it is allowed and where.
10. No smoking in play areas is usually customary.

Speaking Of Normal

By Liz Massiah, Msw,

Recently I became part of a team of helping professionals working at the Edmonton Garrison with members of the armed forces who are struggling with trauma and stress. In conversation with a reaction was "Why would anyone want a gun?" He looked at me and said "To kill with, of course.". "Do you think that that's a good thing?" I asked. Without a pause he said "That's what the military is for.". Then I asked him about women in combat roles and he scoffed, commenting on the stupidity of the notion that women can kill just like a man.

Now I know I am one of "those feminists", as well as being one of "those lesbians", and I know that as such, statements like that start to make me "shirty", as my father used to say. And, of course, the issue goes further: how come so many women are police constables, do as well on exams, etc as their male counterparts, and yet seldom get promoted; or how come so many organizations are powered by women and run by men: how many female folks are there on the United Way Board, on the Telus Board, the GLCEE Board, the EVM Board, or the ERBA board.

On the other hand, though, the therapist part of me looks at these questions and relates them to the larger picture: specifically, the complex, fascinating and frustrating faces of gender.

How do we notice gendering in our lives, our relationships? The lesbian community is often perceived as being more as more equal in our relationships, with the differences between male and female roles being blurred somewhat. But what about all the issues surrounding "butch" and "femme"? What about "tops" and "bottoms"? What about the significance and hoo-ha around being penetrated during anal intercourse for men, something women take for granted during vaginal intercourse, birthing, using tampons, etc? What about tensions over including male children in lesbian groups? Or excluding lesbians who hang out with men as "not real lesbians", while thinking that it's great that gay men will socialize with dykes? Or what about the look of astonishment on a male customer's face when he and I met on the stairs of Pride Video? (I suggested to Dennis that he needs to put up a "Danger: Women May Be Present" sign). If all of that isn't related to the gendering of roles in our community (which some might say is a microcosm of gendering in the big wide world in general), it certainly looks like it.

Sometimes it seems to me that although we have worked hard to claim our different-ness, to be safe in the world as lesbian folks, and that as a result we seem to think we are therefore very different, that difference is something of a fallacy. Some would say, in fact, that gay men (for example), are extremely similar to their straight counterparts in that gay men tend towards non-monogamy because of biology, in exactly the same way straight men, who tend to hang around while the kids are young and then take off to scatter some more seed (as it were), do. Then there are those that would suggest that lesbian relationships take the female "traits" of care-giving and nurturance away from the husband/children focus of nurturance of each other, to the detriment of sexual activity (hence "lesbian dead bed"). And then there's the very gendered notion that men, all men, are helpless in the face of their urge to have sex, yet somehow women have control. I'm not suggesting that any of these is the actual case: they are, in fact, huge generalizations and there are always exceptions and variations. But these thoughts are also expressions of the wondering I'm doing about the way in which complications arising from gender roles and predispositions can sometimes seem to transcend sexuality ... in other words, maybe we're all a little more alike than we might want to admit.

Did you know that our notions of how males should be and how girls should be show themselves even before birth? Research has indicated that if a parent knows what gender the expected child is, comments will be clearly shaped to respond to that gender. If the child kicks, the comments will be about potential football heroes. If it's known that the baby is a girl, there will be more baby talk and the mom's belly will be touched more. Older research tells us that if boy and girl babies are not gender identified in the nursery, staff treat them the same, but as soon as the gender identifiers are put in place, the boys are responded to more slowly and less frequently, and are generally held less than the girls. And let's not even get started on pink and blue. It would seem that all things considered, we are up against pretty pervasive and powerful gendering traditions, since at such early ages our males are taught to be strong, unemotional, "not to be sissies, not be a girl", and that being tough is part of the male deal ...

or ideal. The examples are legion ...

... and isn't it interesting, going back to the image that triggered this article, that the world "legion" sometimes refers to a r m y .

Have you ever wondered why men dress in uniform, why a large group of men, in their dark suits, white shirts, and slash-of-colour ties, all seem to be in uniform ... and how many women feel it important or necessary to dress in feminized versions of that same uniform? Or, to look at it another way, why is it that some men and women like to dress in uniform as part of being sexual? Is it all part of how we permit ourselves to support and concede our own personal strength to power imbalances, even violence?

More on the connection between gender, violence and parenting in another column: as many of you know, there is now an ongoing support group for lesbian and gay parents, called Yours Mine Ours and Us, and since I attend every second meeting to provide some "structured" input, the gathering of useful information regarding lesbigay parenting is now on my ongoing list of "useful things to try to notice and remember".

But for now, let me leave you with this thought: would you respond in the same way to this column if it had been written by a man? Or what if all the images of sexy men in Times .10 were changed to pictures of women ... and if all the images of caring and nurturing were changed to men?

Comments and responses are always welcome ... we look forward to hearing from you.

Well first of all, I had the opportunity to host the CD release party for "Viral Extinction" a while back, but alas, I electronic soundscapes. It's the whole hot & cold, dark & light thing. I don't know where to begin, every track here is outstanding. I suppose my faves are "Overload", "Where Angels Go To Die" & "Cyberchrist". This CD is a must for anyone who's into Elektro/Darkwave music. Hell, even if that isn't your bag, give this disc a try. It's very catchy, and sure to open a lot of ears to this style of music.

basically a remix album with some live & new tracks. Absolutely created for the dance floor. Hell a great Multi Media track on this as well. Release time is November, with a CD release party @ Rebar. Look for a brand new full-length CD Mid 2K. Bauhaus- Gotham (Metropolis) For those of you fortunate enough to have experienced the Bauhaus "Resurrection Tour" last summer, this double CD and video companion will serve as a memoir of your long agonizing trip to Vancouver to see the FANGtastic four. OK, some of you went else where, but I digress... This should be in stores on Nov 9, and I know it'll be worth every penny. The memories will come rushing back for all that witnessed the event, and will undoubtedly make others wish they were there.

Also coming soon, is: Electropolis 2 (Metropolis) London After Midnight- Violent Acts of Beauty (Metropolis) as well as a new album from goth kings (?) The Cure. Most of these CD's will be available in town at Haxed upon release.

Below are my top 10, (count em, I dare ya) check them out, they are well worth the listen.

My Monthly Neurosis

This column was going to be about SEX but circumstances changed and though still peripherally tied to everyone's favorite topic, it's going to diverge into a darker and more serious realm. I'm 22 now, which means I was born in 1977. By the time Sex Ed started for me in school, AIDS was already the big news the media. By the time I finished junior high, condom use was already advocated as the near surefire way of preventing HIV transmission. When I came out in 1993, I already knew what HIV was and how to make sure I never had to deal with it, because really, no one wants to have to deal with it. For me and for most people around my age, we all missed the big fear, back when no one understood what was happening, and when the finally did understand, when it was already too late. We missed burying friends and family. We missed the painful good byes that made AIDS so real, and so what we are now is a generation of people that knows about AIDS without really having AIDS as a reality.

While on one hand, that's a positive sign that by the early - mid 90s when we were coming out, we were educated about HIV/AIDS. On another hand though, missing out on all the tragic loss means that we just don't really understand a) what it was like to be alive then and b) what the big deal really is. That is, we don't understand until something happens that brings it close to home.

The reason I am so crazed about this right now is that a friend of mine recently had a close call. He learned that someone he'd had unprotected sex with a year or so ago is positive, and was positive at the time. But he had no sense of how REAL AIDS was, and so he says "well we were both drunk and didn't think about using condoms cuz we were carried away in the heat of the moment, and besides, if he knew, he should have insisted". In other words, he gave a lot of explanations for why he showed up at his house at 2:30 in the morning, shaking and crying and wanting to plunge headfirst into a bottle of vodka. This is what it took to make it real for him. A queasy stomach, clammy hands, nightmare after nightmare after nightmare, and a frustration that last call and happy hour were so far apart, because drinking was the one way to find oblivion before the next phase of his reality set in: the coming-of-age of any sexually active person in the 90s: the HIV test. The clinical questions about who he'd done, and what he'd done with them, and the suggestions that he should definitely do things differently in the future. And then the staring at the ceiling tiles as the nurse took his blood, and the nausea returning like a slap in the face as he wondered if there was something in that blood that would mean life would change, no matter how advanced the medication, no matter how decreased the stigma. Life would never be the same. If the results were negative, then a quick prayer of thanks would only precede an anti-sex phase that would quickly fade back into the same old routine, though hopefully that remembered fear would tear the condom out of the wrapper the next time the moment got too hot. If the results were positive, well, then there'd be a newfound sense of making every moment count, because cocktails can only get you so far and there's no way he wants to be just another statistic.

I'm telling you this, with his permission, because it completely freaked me out. And I want it to freak you out too. AIDS hasn't gone away. Just because you weren't out and about in the 80s doesn't mean you're immune. Sex still comes with no guarantees. I know I promised this column would be light and fun and easy-going, but some neuroses just aren't that way. I could've written about bitchy drag queens or holier-than-thou relationship-queens or the way shooter sales need to occur far more frequently on Friday nights. But instead I got up on my soap box and preached you a sermon on safer sex. It's a sermon you really can't hear too much. I wish could end this on a happy note, but as this issue goes to press, my friend is still sitting at home, biting his nails, waiting. His results aren't in yet. The waiting, he says, is the hardest part, because the dread, the fear, the terror aren't a fair payment for a night he can barely remember now. It would've taken them an extra ten seconds to put on a condom. 10 seconds for safety compared to 10 days of waiting. You do the math.

The Sexiest Night of the Year

By Joe Achtemichuk

Have you been dreaming about a trip to the Australian Mardi Gras in Sydney, or the Black and Blue in Montreal? Save your money, we have a party that encompasses elements of both and then some. Electric Lava Masquerade Ball is the next generation of adult entertainment and is about to set Edmonton on its ear. Our goal for the evening is to wind you up, so you'll go home and have great sex.

On Saturday, December 11, the Arts Barn will undergo a transition, from theatre playhouse to adult entertainment playground. For starters, you'll need your best masquerade costume. Come in anything that makes you feel sensual from classic wear to more extreme leather, uniform or fetish wear. Dress up in a tuxedo or evening gown or dress down in jeans and a T-shirt. You can create an elaborate and unique masque or get one at the door. The evening is a voyeur's dream and if you want to be a little wilder anything goes. All staff and volunteers at the event will be dressed up in costumes, so don't be shy: Dress up! Like we say, come out and "Be Who You Aren't".

Electric Lava is welcoming a number of celebrities for the weekend. Micheal Turner, author of American Whiskey Bar, Hard Core Logo and The Pornographer's Poem. Will join the party. The Globe & Mail bills his new book, "An intelligent novel that neatly bridges the gap between the play of experimental fiction and the pleasures of narrative." Micheal is looking forward to coming to Edmonton and even has a few surprises for the evening.

Another erotic writer who may make an appearance at Electric Lava is Evan Soloman.

Crossing the Distance, his first novel is already raising eyebrows across the country. Evan can also be seen hosting CBC Newsworld's "Hot Type". Discussions are well underway to bring Evan to Electric Lava.

To this point I have titillated, now let me take you to the next level. Two stages will be set up, one in the sub hall and one in the main hall. The evening will start out with a human buffet by the BDSM community and silent auction viewing. The party will continue to include fetish fantasies, a fashion show, and both live and silent auction.

A silent and live auction will take place in the main hall, with hotel romance packages, sensual artwork, and other sexy gear. Enhance your love life by bringing some erotic treasures home with you. A website is being set up to view all items before the auction.

A fashion show of designer, leather, fetish, chain mail fashions, and body piercing will take place throughout the night and then on stage. Local designers and models will strut their stuff to the delight of all onlookers. You can enjoy fashions by Cherry Bomb, Battlewear, Vorstellen, Cleavage of Doom, Industrial Resolution, UAoch Designs, and much more.

The fetish fantasies start on the mainstage and will then move to the sub stage. All of the fetish shows will be coordinated by Sir Micheal. If you have any fantasies that you would like to live out on stage, the shows are interactive.

On the mainstage, Edmonton's best live performers and impersonators will entertain you, with some special surprises from the out of towners. Funky Pickle Pizza will be on location selling pizza. A temporary tattoo booth and a meet you match board, just in case you come alone and are looking for a date. That's just the confirmed events. Stay tuned for any updates. Keep an eye on Northern Light Theatre's website (currently under construction - www.accessweb.com/nlt/) for new info.

At Midnight the main hall will turn into a wild masquerade dance party. Music and DJ's supplied by the Roost, with fantasies continuing in the sub hall. Don't worry about partying too hard and Driving home. Those party patrons who have partook too much can use free programs such as those provided by Keys Please and Operation Red Nose to get home.

So there you have it, a rough outline of Electric Lava. A fund-raiser in disguise for Northern Light Theatre. Tickets are $20.00 in advance. Obviously, this is an 18+ event, so if you are an adult, call 471-1586 for tickets. Buy your tickets now or you'll be waiting in line, begging for someone to leave.

Warning! Electric Lava contains some nudity, and scantily clad performers!

About the Front Cover and the Artist

I recently graduated from the University of Alberta with a Bachelor of Fine Arts in painting. My work used to be primarily landscapes but has changed to themes and subject matter that is controversial in nature, such as breast cancer and paintings with strong gay content. This particular painting 'Encounter' 46" x 61" oil on masonite was part of a series titled 'You never know what is behind a closed door' which depicts moments in the lives of people — snapshots of human encounters (all sexual orientations) that are usually kept private.

The viewer bears witness to people from unusual angles as if they are looking through a lens placed somewhere in the scene, just outside the picture frame. Most of the paintings have therefore taken on a closely cropped narrative effects where the story is thus played out by either the viewer, the characters, or perhaps both. Badminton League

We are a group trying to get re-established playing at the Rosslyn School ...The idea to revive a badminton group in Edmonton spawned when several of us in Edmonton were approached by compatriots in Calgary. They were looking for some badminton players for a tournament they were organizing. Without an established network of badminton players in Edmonton, it was difficult to even start to find players. Several years ago there was another badminton league in Edmonton. Unfortunately, when several core members moved away and the regular gym was no longer available, the league folded. In hiatus for a time, it was time to try to revive the group.

The badminton league is designed for men and women of all levels. You may be an experienced player or a novice. In any case, you are welcome.

Location: Rosslyn Elementary/Junior High School, 13215 - 113A Street,

Time: Monday from 8 p.m. to 10 p.m.

Dates: Oct 25, 1999 to May 15, 2000 (The school has reserved some dates when the gym is not available.)

Cost: $40 per person for the season

Contact: Bruce at 453-1244 (after 1pm)
(email cwbyteddy@powersurfr.com)

You can start spreading the word to anyone (players and supporters) you think that may be interested.

The Western Cup Tournament in Calgary (next one is March 31- April 2, 2000) includes badminton now.

This is a fun weekend worth attending. Come on out to practice and get ready for the next tournament or come out just to have some fun.

Breaking Away

You've heard of travel for business and travel for pleasure, but have you ever considered them together? Many companies make it their business to design specialized travel packages for consumers, designed to meet a variety of interests. These interests include musical performances, physical activities, sports, education, and pretty much anything else that would interest you. If you have a defined interest that you need to travel to experience, then chances are there is a specialized tour package that is right for you.

The specialty packages that you will probably run across most often is those dedicated to physical activity. Many companies offer these types of tours, and they come in a variety of different physical interests. Some of the more common ones out of Edmonton would include white water rafting in Maligne Canyon, mountain climbing in the Rockies, hiking along the BC coast, or skiing in Banff. While some of these packages offer reasonable rates for above average accommodations, others are built around camping or hosteling and often can include providing your own food. Either way, as long as you pick the one that best serves your interest and comfort level, both serve as a great way to meet lots of people with similar interests.

Those travelers looking for a specialized tour that provides educational value may be surprised at the myriad of choices that are available. Examples would include World Expo's, volunteer programs, pilgrimages such as the Canterbury Tales pilgrimage, and religious packages. It is even possible to obtain a package to another country to learn the language of that country. The majority of packages specializing in educational tours will include a defined itinerary of some type, with set accommodations and transportation. Some, such as those for volunteer programs may involve a much less organized schedule. If you are considering one of these educational type packages, make sure that you choose a credible organization to ensure your safety and that you get what you want to out of the trip.

If you are a sports enthusiast, you know that there is nothing better than watching your favorite teams in action live and in person rather than on TV. Specialty Packages along this line are also available to you. Know matter what city that the sporting event happens to occur in, if you want to see it live, chances are that it is possible. Some of the events that packages are often tailor made for include the Superbowl, the World Series, the Stanley Cup, and the Grey Cup. It is even possible to watch your favorite golfers live, wherever they may be, with the ease of a golf package. It may be helpful to know that most of these packages will include your accommodations as well as your transportation and tickets to the event, but will only include the nights of the event taking place. If you want to make a week's holiday out of the trip, you may have to add on the extra nights at the hotel. The good news is that most of the tour companies will offer the extra nights at a reasonable rate. Please keep in mind, however, that this is not always possible.

One of the more obscure specialty packages available is those involving music. These packages come in a wide variety according to personal musical tastes. Small one or two day packages to see a musical group are a sensible alternative for a weekend getaway, such as those offered to see Elton John or IN SYNC in Winnipeg or Calgary. Week long packages to see Broadway musicals and theatre performances can also be found, providing you with both a get-away and a first rate theatre performance without the worry of not getting tickets to the show that you want to see. Provided that you use a reputable tour company, tickets for the concert, musical and theatre performances are usually good to excellent tickets as they are bought in advance by the Tour Company. One other form of musical type specialty packages that you may not have thought of is those that involve travelling with your favorite radio DJ's, such as from Power 92 or CISN-FM. These packages can provide a very fun way to unwind while at the same time allowing you the opportunity to get to know the people behind the voices that introduce some of your favorite songs on the radio every day.

As you can see, no matter where your interests lie, there is probably going to be a specialty package that is right for you. Whether it's white water rafting down a raging river, seeing a favorite musical group or sports time live, or learning a new language in its natural environment, one specialty package can take care of all of the different travel arrangements you need in one simple step, making your trip much more worry free.

Gay Mayoral Candidate Tom Ammiano

Supervisor Tom Ammiano filed appropriate papers with the Registrar of Voters for qualification as a candidate for Mayor of San Francisco. Ammiano will be discussing the reasons leading to his decision to run and specifically his choice to become a write-in candidate.

The Metropolitan Community Church of San Francisco Sunday night service has become a weekly unofficial gathering place for the city's gay community. For Ammiano, the service provides an opportunity to define his views, give information, listen and lead the community he serves as an openly gay elected official.

Coming together each Sunday night as individuals, and as a community, underscores the importance we place on both our spiritual and our community values," said Rev. Jim Mitulski, the church's senior pastor.

Co-Pastors of Metropolitan Community Church of San Francisco are Rev. Jim Mitulski and Rev. Penny Nixon. Assistant Pastor is Rev. Karen Foster. With over 500 members, it is one of San Francisco's largest and most active churches. The Sunday evening service is another example of how the church has served the spiritual needs of San Francisco's gay and lesbian people for over 30 years.

Building A Dam

Dear Mr. De Vries:

SUBJECT: DEQ File No. 97-59-0023; T11N, R10W, Sec. 20; Montcalm County

It has come to the attention of the Department of Environmental Quality that there has been recent unauthorized activity on the above-referenced parcel of property.

You have been certified as the legal landowner and/or contractor who did the following unauthorized activity: Construction and maintenance of two wood debris dams across the outlet stream of Spring Pond. A permit must be issued prior to the start of this type of activity. A review of the Department's files shows that no permits have been issued.

Therefore, the Department has determined that this activity is in violation of Part 301, Inland Lakes and Streams, of the Natural Resource and Environmental Protection Act, Act 451 of the Public Acts of 1994, being sections 324.30101 to 324.30113 of the Michigan Compiled Laws, annotated.

The Department has been informed that one or both of the dams partially failed during a recent rain event, causing debris and flooding at downstream locations. We find that dams of this nature are inherently hazardous and cannot be permitted.

The Department therefore orders you to cease and desist all unauthorized activities at this location, and to restore the stream to a free-flow condition by removing all wood and brush forming the dams from the stream channel. All restoration work shall be completed no later than January 31, 1998.

Please notify this office when the restoration has been completed so that our staff may schedule a follow-up site inspection. Failure to comply with this request or any further unauthorized activity on the site may result in this case being referred for elevated enforcement action. We anticipate and would appreciate your full cooperation in this matter. Please feel free to contact me at this office if you have any questions.

Sincerely, David L. Price
District Representative
Land and Water Management Division

RESPONSE

Dear Mr. Price:
Re: DEQ File No. 97-59-0023; T11N, R10W, Sec. 20; Montcalm County

Your certified letter dated 12/17/97 has been handed to me to respond to. You sent out a great deal of carbon copies to a lot of people, but you neglected to include their addresses. You will, therefore, have to send them a copy of my response. First of all, Mr. Ryan De Vries is not the legal landowner and/or contractor at 2088 Dagget, Pierson, Michigan—I am the legal owner and a couple of beavers are in the (State unauthorized) process of constructing and maintaining two wood "debris" dams across the outlet stream of my Spring Pond. While I did not pay for, authorize, nor supervised their dam project, I think they would be highly offended that you call their skillful use of natural building materials "debris." I would like to challenge your department to attempt to emulate their dam project any time and/or any place you choose. I believe I can safely state there is no way you could ever match their dam skills, their dam resourcefulness, their dam ingenuity, their dam persistence, their dam determination and/or their dam work ethic.

As to your request, I do not think the beavers are aware that they first must fill out a dam permit prior to the start of this type of dam activity.

My first dam question to you is: (1) are you trying to discriminate against my Spring Pond Beavers or (2) do you require all beavers throughout this State to conform to said dam request? If you are not discriminating against these particular beavers, through the Freedom of Information Act I request completed copies of all those other applicable beaver dam permits that have been issued. Perhaps we will see if there really is a dam violation of Part 301, Inland Lakes and Streams, of the Natural Resource and Environmental Protection Act, Act 451 of the Public Acts of 1994, being sections 324.30101 to 324.30113 of the Michigan Compiled Laws, annotated.

I have several concerns. My first concern is — aren't the beavers entitled to legal representation? The Spring Pond Beavers are financially destitute and are unable to pay for said representation — so the State will have to provide them with a dam lawyer. The Department's dam concern that either one or both of the dams failed during a recent rain event causing flooding is proof that this is a natural occurrence, which the department is required to protect. In other words, we should leave the Spring Pond Beavers alone rather than harassing them and calling their dam names.

If you want the stream "restored" to a dam free-flow condition — please contact the beavers — but if you are going to arrest them (they obviously did not pay any attention to your dam letter — being unable to read English) — be sure they are read the Miranda rights first. As for me, I am not going to cause more flooding or dam debris jams by interfering with these dam builders. If you want to hurt these dam

Large Donation of Valuable Books

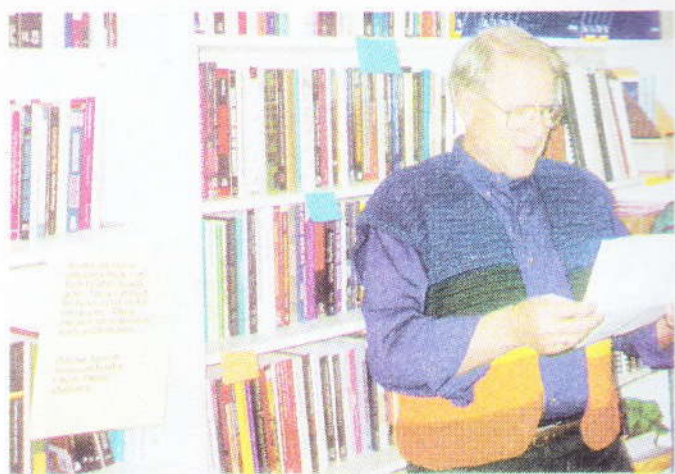

On October 21, friends and acquaintances of Thomas Edge gathered at HIV Edmonton to dedicate the Tom Edge Resource Centre. The resource centre is an important addition to the gay and lesbian community of Edmonton, as it provides a plethora of information on a large variety of sexuality issues.

The centre is made even more valuable with the large donation of books from the personal library of Sheryl Anne McInnes, who passed away in 1998. The collection of books provides information on several different levels, focussing on topics of sexuality pertaining to the gay, lesbian and transgender community. There is also a large portion of books dedicated to queer history. The donation of books provides a constant reminder of Sheryl and her important role as a feminist lesbian activist. The books were lovingly donated to the centre by Sheryl's same-sex spouse Maureen Irwin.

The resource centre was made possible through a donation from Tom Edge prior to his death in 1991. The centre is now named in his memory. Many people remember Thomas A. Edge in several different ways and environments. In 1973, he began working at Athabasca University as Information Processor for the library. He eventually became the librarian, overseeing a large staff of people. As time went by, Tom's role at the University became one of great importance to the growth of the library. His ideas and concepts went a long way in helping to make the library what it is today.

The Tom Edge Resource Centre and the donation of books from the collection of Sheryl Anne McInnes provides the city of Edmonton and its surrounding communities with a great asset. The centre is something that was needed in the community and will surely be a help to many people. Its name and contents have also provided people with a unique way to remember two of Edmonton's great citizens, Thomas A. Edge and Sheryl Anne McInnes.

For more information on the Tom Edge Resource Centre and what it has to offer, please contact Heather at 488-5742, or visit the centre at HIV Edmonton, #600, 10242-105st.

Justice Kirby Speaks

The world's only openly gay justice of a court of final appeal broke his silence July 2 at a London conference on recognition of same-sex partnerships.

Australian High Court Justice Michael Kirby came out in April by listing his male partner of 30 years in the 1999 edition of Who's Who In Australia, but had refused further comment.

Now, in a 30-page speech to Law Lords, senior international judges and other legal scholars, Kirby said, among much else: "The advent of the human genome project and the likelihood that, in many cases at least, sexual orientation is genetically determined, make it totally unacceptable to impose upon those affected unreasonable legal discrimination or demands that they change. It was always unacceptable; but now no informed person has an excuse for blind prejudice and unreasonable conduct. If we are talking about the 'unnatural' demands that people deny their sexuality or try to change it if it is part of their nature are a good illustration of what is unnatural."

He also said: "People are not fools. Once they recognize the overwhelming commonalities of shared human experience, the alienation and demand for adherence to shame crumbles. Once they reflect upon the utter unreasonableness of insisting that homosexuals change their sexual orientation, or suppress and hide their emotions — something they could not demand of themselves — the irrational insistence and demand for legal sanctions tends to fade away. Once they know friends or family members are gay, the hatred tends to melt. In the wake of the changing social attitudes inevitably come changing laws: statutes made by parliaments as well as the common law made by judges."

What the Year 2,000 Could Be Like.

Your alarm clock rings on the first business day of the Year 2000, and you expect this day to be like any other. Always the worrywart, you're staying off of airplanes and you pulled your cash out of the bank, plus the IT department at your company solved the millennium problem months ago. But if the public agencies in your area haven't addressed the Year 2000 glitch, you could be in for a surprise. The following is, of course, an absolute worst-case scenario, but parts of it could be coming to town near you and are based on actual fears expressed by agencies across the country:

7 a.m. You wake up and hop in the shower. You notice a funny smell. Obviously your local water agency's treatment facility didn't fix the millennium bug.

8 a.m. You head for the subway, only to find that Y2K snafus have halted trains for the day.

8:30 a.m. You return home to get your car and drive to work. Red lights are flashing at all of the intersections because the systems weren't Year 2000-compliant.

9 a.m. Somebody runs one of the flashing red lights in front of you, crashing into another car. You get out to call 9-1-1, but the emergency system doesn't work.

10 a.m. You finally get to work and have a meeting with partners in the new company you're starting. Unfortunately, the state has lost its records on incorporated companies and cannot process your request.

2 p.m. You head for the county hospital, where you've scheduled a minor surgery. Things are in disarray because medical devices have failed throughout the day.

4 p.m. The hospital, which has lost all of its appointments, finally admits you. An embedded chip in the elevator fails, and the assistants must drag you and your gurney up the stairs.

7 p.m. You go home to call a friend and complain about your day, but the telephone line is dead because the company hasn't tackled the Year 2000 glitch. But then again, maybe you won't experience any of it. If your electric company isn't Year 2000-compliant, you might sleep through your alarm.

They died in the Service

One Sunday morning, the pastor noticed little Johnny was staring up at the large plaque that hung in the foyer of the church. The seven-year-old had been staring at the plaque for some time, so the pastor walked up, stood beside the boy, and said quietly, "Good morning son."

"Good morning pastor" replied the young man, focused on the plaque. "Sir, what is this?" Johnny asked. "Well son, these are all the people who have died in the service," replied the pastor. Soberly, they stood together, staring at the large plaque. Little Johnny's voice barely broke the silence when he asked quietly, "Which one sir, the 8:30 or the 10:30 service?"

A Wet Rabbit...

A woman walks into a vet's waiting room. She's dragging a wet rabbit on a leash. The rabbit does NOT want to be there. "Sit, Fluffy," she says. Fluffy glares at her, and sopping wet, jumps up on another customer's lap, getting water all over him.

"I said SIT, now there's a good Fluffy," says the woman, slightly embarrassed. Fluffy, wet already, squats in the middle of the room and pees.

The woman, mortally embarrassed, shouts, "Goddamn it Fluffy, will you be good?!" Fluffy then starts a fight with a Doberman and pursues it out of the office. As the woman leaves to go after it, she turns to the rest of the flabbergasted customers and says: "Pardon me, I've just washed my hare, and can't do a thing with it!"

How Bad Is It?

A distraught patient phoned her doctor's office. Was it true, the woman wanted to know, that the medication the doctor had prescribed was for the rest of her life? She was told that it was. There was a moment of silence before the woman continued, "I'm wondering, then, just how serious my condition is. This prescription is marked "NO REFILLS."

Tax Deduction

A little boy, who wanted $100.00 very badly, prayed for two weeks but nothing happened. Then he decided to write GOD a letter requesting $100.00.

When the postal authorities received the letter to GOD, Canada, they decided to send it to the Prime Minister. The Prime Minister was so impressed, touched, and amused that he instructed his secretary to send the boy $5.00. Mr. Chretien thought that this would appear to be a lot of money to the little boy. The little boy was delighted with the $5.00 and immediately sat down to write a thank you note to GOD that read: "Dear God, Thank you very much for sending me the money. However, I noticed that for some reason you had to send it through Ottawa, and, as usual, those JERKS deducted $95.00 for taxes!"

My son's choking! He swallowed a quarter!

One day, at a local buffet, a man suddenly called out, "My son's choking! He swallowed a quarter! Help! Please, anyone! Help! A man from a nearby table stood up and announced that he was quite experienced at this sort of thing. He stepped over with almost no look of concern at all, wrapped his arms around the boy, and squeezed. Out popped the quarter. The man then went back to his table as though nothing had happened. "Thank you! Thank you!" the father cried. "Are you a paramedic?" "No," replied the man. "I work for Revenue Canada."

Whisky and Worms

A professor of chemistry wanted to teach his 5th grade class a lesson about the evils of liquor, so he produced an experiment that involved a glass of water, a glass of whiskey, and two worms. "Now, class. Observe closely the worms," said the professor putting a worm first into the water. The worm in the water writhed about, happy as a worm in water could be. The second worm, he put into the whiskey. It writhed painfully, and quickly sank to the bottom, dead as a doornail. "Now, what lesson can we derive from this experiment?" the professor asked. Johnny, who naturally sits in back, raised his hand and wisely, responded, "Drink whiskey and you won't get worms."

Hey, Who's That?

Whilst enjoying a drink with a friend one night, this guy decides to try his luck with an attractive young girl sitting alone by the bar. To his surprise, she asks him to join her for a drink and eventually asks him if he'd like to come back to her place.

The pair jump into a taxi and as soon as they get back to her flat they dive onto the bed and spend the night hard at it. Finally, the spent young guy rolls over, pulls out a cigarette from his jeans and searches for his lighter. Unable to find it, he asks the girl if she has one at hand.

"There might be some matches in the top drawer," she replies. Opening the drawer of the bedside table, he finds a box of matches sitting neatly on top of a framed picture of another man. Naturally, the guy begins to worry. "Is this your husband?" he inquires nervously. "No, silly," she replies, snuggling up to him. "Your boyfriend then?" "No, don't be daft," she says, nibbling away at his ear. "Well, who is he then?" demands the bewildered guy. Calmly, the girl takes a match, strikes it across the side of her face and replies, "That's me before the operation."

When I grow up... & get released???

Dr. Leroy, the head psychiatrist at the local mental hospital, is examining patients to see if they're cured and ready to re-enter society. "So, Mr. Clark," the doctor says to one of his patients, "I see by your chart that you've been recommended for dismissal. Do you have any idea what you might do once you're released?"

The patient thinks for a moment, then replies,

"Well, I went to school for mechanical engineering. That's still a good field, good money there. But on the other hand, I thought I might write a book about my experience here in the hospital, what it's like to be a patient here. People might be interested in reading a book like that. In addition, I thought I might go back to college and study art history, which I've grown interested in lately."

Dr. Leroy nods and says, "Yes, those all sound like intriguing possibilities." The patient replies, "And the best part is, in my spare time, I can go on being a teapot."

Attention All

There was a husband and his wife sitting next to a drunk in a bar. Suddenly the drunk stands up and yells, "ATTENTION ALL" and farts loudly. The wife is extremely embarrassed, and the husband looks at the drunk and says "Excuse me, you just farted in front of my wife." The drunk replies, "I'm sorry I didn't know it was her turn."

Cooking

Two confirmed bachelors sat talking, their conversation drifted from politics to cooking. "I got a cookbook once," said one, "but I could never do anything with it." "Too much fancy work in it, eh?" asked the other. "You said it. Every one of the recipes began the same way - 'Take a clean dish.'"

Don't look any horse in the mouth...

The story is told of a day when Queen Elizabeth had the Duke of Edinburgh over for a cup of tea. The conversation turned equestrian and the Queen was telling the Duke about her new prize horse. After a spell of ranting and raving over this horse the Duke said, "Well, then, let's see this fine animal!"

So the Queen and the Duke went over to the stables to admire the horse. At one point the Queen walked around the horse, just as it let out an earth trembling belch, with a smell that... let's just say it would take a few boxes of tic-tacks for this one. The Queen turned a bit red and said, "Oh, I am terribly sorry about that!"

"Oh, that's quite alright," the Duke replied, "I had thought it was the horse!"

First-Aid

"How come you're late?" asks the bartender as the blonde waitress walks in the door.

"It was awful," she explains. "I was walking down Elm Street and there was this terrible accident. A man was lying in the middle of the street; he was thrown from his car. His leg was broken, his skull was fractured, and there was blood everywhere. Thank God I took that first-aid course; all my training came back to me in a minute." "What did you do?" asks the bartender. "I sat down and put my head between my knees to keep from fainting!"

New Calendar Features Saskatchewan Nude Beaches (Gasp!)

By Rover

Edmonton-based Over-Time Productions continues its foray in the creative arts with the release of "On The Saskatchewan River 2000", a calendar of black-and-white photography by Saskatoon photographer Dieter Braun. This is a second outing for Dieter Braun who released his first calendar, "Cranberry Flats" two years ago. This time around, he teamed up with Over-Time Productions' Joe Achemichuk to promote his latest calendar in Alberta. Says Braun, "Most Albertans have a preconceived notion of Saskatchewan as being Alberta's boring neighbour". He laughs, "I think this calendar will change a few people's minds". He may be right since "On The Saskatchewan River 2000" features none other than the Saskatoon area's two nude beaches, Cranberry Flats and Bare-ass Beach. Some of the photos range from women enjoying a sunset on the riverfront, to one nude of a guy leaping though the air in a dancer-like pose to catch a football, or as Braun puts it, "there's something in this calendar for everyone!" Braun adds, "Actually, only part of Cranberry Flats is nude with the rest of the beach attracting people with clothes! Both of these beaches have been around for at least 25 years although they remain one of Saskatoon's best kept secrets."

Braun's concept for "On The Saskatchewan River 2000" is predominantly about "people enjoying the riverbank". He adds, "I wanted the calendar to remind people about the beauty of our riverbank. We're really lucky here in Saskatoon to have some great beaches 10 minutes from Saskatoon. Not only are they so close, but they're extremely clean and void of crowd, litter etc., the kind of stuff that you'd find at busier beaches". Although much of Braun's calendar includes photos taken at the aforementioned beaches, the calendar includes a wide range of photos from sandcastles, landscape and other portraits taken at various spots along the riverbank. Braun adds, "Some of these photos were fairly difficult to get. For example, the one photo with the guy catching a football, took about 40

Braun plans to have the calendar available in many of the locally owned bookstores and retail shops in Saskatoon. Achemichuk at Over-Time Productions says the calendar will be made available at this year's Loud and Queer Festival on November 5-6 in Edmonton with other locations to follow in the near future. Also calendars can be available through email: hunnybunny111@hotmail.com

Testing a Vaccine

CDC Supports Thai Health Officials and VaxGen in Collaborative Effort

It is estimated that over 30 million individuals worldwide are infected with HIV—the vast majority of whom live in the developing world.

One country in particular, Thailand, has experienced a rapidly escalating and severe HIV epidemic since 1988. Among the 60 million inhabitants of Thailand, as many as 800,000 people are currently believed to be living with HIV. Despite innovative and persistent prevention efforts, HIV continues to spread rapidly, particularly among Thailand's population of injection drug users (IDUs). Methadone treatment, education and counseling on HIV prevention, and easy access to sterile needles have certainly helped to slow the epidemic. Yet, among IDUs in Bangkok, 6% continue to become infected each year. In addition to being one of the nations most severely affected by HIV, Thailand has emerged as one of the nations most committed to ending its toll. To address the urgent need for an HIV vaccine, Thai officials have been working with the World Health Organization, the Joint United Nations Program on HIV/AIDS (UNAIDS), the International AIDS Vaccine Initiative (IAVI), the Government of Japan, the U.S. National Institutes of Health (NIH), the U.S. Department of Defense, various universities, and the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) since 1991 to prepare for HIV vaccine efficacy trials. In February 1999, Thailand became the first developing nation to announce a Phase III vaccine field trial. A Phase III trial is done to determine if a vaccine is effective in protecting against infection or disease and is an important step in the evaluation process leading to licensure.

AIDSVAX Phase III trial in Thailand

As part of the Thai National Plan for HIV vaccine research, the Bangkok Metropolitan Administration (BMA) is leading the 3-year collaborative research trial to evaluate the ability of AIDSVAX to prevent HIV infection among uninfected IDUs in Bangkok, Thailand. AIDSVAX was developed by VaxGen, a U.S. vaccine developer. BMA is conducting the trial in conjunction with VaxGen, the Mahidol University Faculty of Tropical Medicine in Bangkok, and the HIV/AIDS Collaboration (a long-standing research collaboration between the Thai Ministry of Public Health and CDC). The trial is being conducted among uninfected IDUs attending 17 drug treatment clinics in Bangkok. The design is a randomized, double blind, placebo-controlled trial in which half of the 2,500 volunteers receive the AIDSVAX vaccine and the other half receive placebo injections that do not include the vaccine. Neither the researchers nor the participants know which participants are in each half of the trial. To guard against the relaxation of preventive behaviors, all volunteers receive extensive counseling on how to protect themselves against HIV infection, as well as explicit warnings that this vaccine may not protect them from infection. To further ensure that trial participants are not inadvertently placed at any risk, the trial design, as well as all procedures and protocols for study recruitment and counseling, have received extensive scientific and ethics review by Institutional Review Boards and ethics committees of all involved agencies, both the Thai and U.S. government, and the Joint United Nations Program on HIV/AIDS.

About AIDSVAX

AIDSVAX is a "bivalent" vaccine, meaning it is composed of gp120 proteins found on the outer envelope of two strains of HIV. The version of the vaccine being tested in Thailand is designed to induce antibodies to HIV-1 subtypes B and E, the subtypes of HIV most common in South East Asia and the Pacific Rim.

VaxGen is currently evaluating another version of AIDSVAX designed to protect against strains common in North America among 5,000 volunteers in multiple sites throughout the United States. Thai health officials played a leading role in acknowledging the critical need for a vaccine designed for use in Thailand to protect against strains of both subtypes B and E. Early reports from several smaller trials of AIDSVAX in Thailand and the United States, involving about 2,000 persons, have shown the vaccine to be safe and capable of inducing antibodies against these strains of HIV.

U.S. Vaccine Research

Although AIDSVAX is the first vaccine to move to Phase III trials in a developing country, as well as in the United States, it is only one of a series of vaccines that are in various stages of the development process.

The National Institutes of Health (NIH) is the agency responsible for coordinating the simultaneous evaluation of multiple vaccine candidates in the United States.

CDC's Role in Vaccine Research and Evaluation

Maintaining Progress in Prevention as We Strive for New Solutions

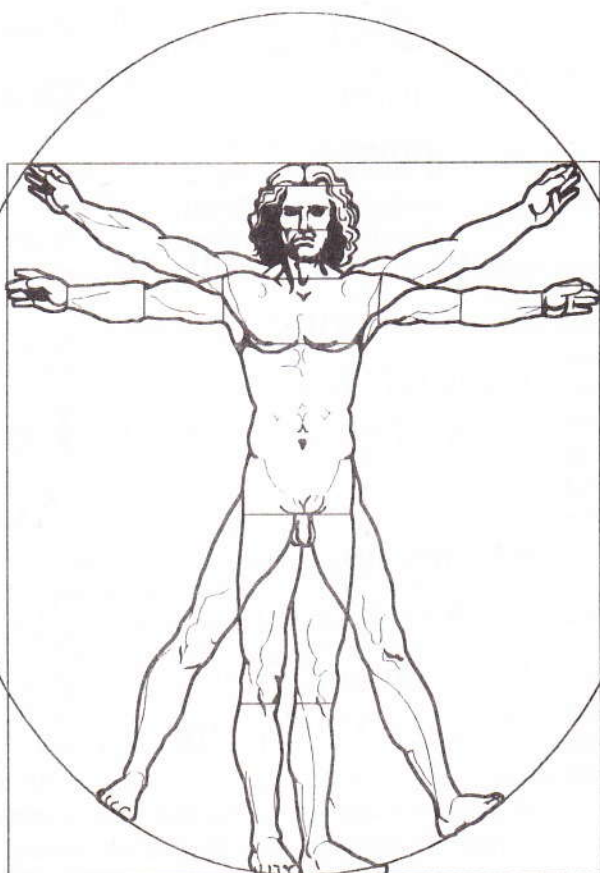

As we work toward this goal through this and other vaccine trials, it is critical that we not endanger progress already made in HIV prevention and that neither individuals involved in nor those outside of studies abandon safer sex and drug-related behaviors proven to

Since 1995, this collaboration has involved a range of activities, including measuring the level of new infections in Thailand, identifying a group of individuals who are willing to participate in a trial and can be followed over time to evaluate risk behaviors and infection, and working with the community to build the understanding and support necessary to implement the trial. Second, CDC has worked, and will continue to work, with Thai health officials and VaxGen to ensure that individuals in the trial receive appropriate risk-reduction counseling and are fully educated about how the trial works, the potential risks and benefits of participation, and the need for maintaining good behavioral risk-reduction practices during the trial.

For example, as the trial proceeds, CDC will evaluate the impact of the trial on both participant and community attitudes and behaviors. This information will be critical not only to this community, but also to the future evaluation and implementation of vaccine strategies. CDC is not providing direct financial support for this trial but will provide logistical, laboratory, and data analysis support throughout the trial.

CDC hopes that this and other vaccine trials underway will identify an HIV vaccine to help end this epidemic. Until such a solution is available, we must continue to reinforce the already proven behavioral and biomedical methods of HIV prevention.

CDC is the United States' lead federal agency for prevention, including HIV prevention. CDC has nearly two decades of experience in designing and evaluating programs to reduce the spread of HIV among populations at risk. Additionally, the agency has a long history of vaccine development and evaluation with other diseases (measles, hepatitis B, and polio). CDC shares the ultimate goal of all of those working to stop the HIV and AIDS epidemic—a vaccine to prevent infection.

CDC's Role in the Thailand Trial

CDC's primary role in the Thailand trial is two-fold. First, continuing a longstanding research collaboration, CDC has worked closely with the Thai government for several years to help them prepare to implement vaccine studies.

Building a Dam

beavers — be aware I am sending a copy of your dam letter and this response to PETA. If your dam department seriously finds all dams of this nature inherently hazardous and truly will not permit their existence in this State — I seriously hope you are not selectively enforcing this dam policy — or once again both I and the Spring Pond Beavers will scream prejudice!

In my humble opinion, the Spring Pond Beavers have a right to build their unauthorized dams as long as the sky is blue, the grass is green and water flows downstream. They have more dam right than I do to live and enjoy Spring Pond. If the Department of Natural Resources and Environmental Protection lives up to its name, it should protect the natural resources (Beavers) and the environment (Beavers' Dams).

So, as far as the beavers and I are concerned, this dam case can be referred for more elevated enforcement action right now. Why wait until 1/31/98? The Spring Pond Beavers may be under the dam ice then and there will be no way for you or your dam staff to contact/harass them then.

In conclusion, I would like to bring to your attention a real environmental quality (health) problem in the area. It is the bears.

Bears are actually defecating in our woods. I definitely believe you should be persecuting the defecating bears and leave the beavers alone. If you are going to investigate the beaver dam, watch your step! (The bears are not careful where they dump!)

Being unable to comply with your dam request, and being unable to contact you on your dam answering machine, I am sending this response to your dam office via another government organization — the dam USPS. Maybe, someday, it will get there.

Sincerely, Stephen L. Svedten

Money Matters: CNNfn Explores Lesbian and Gay Financial Planning

On Oct. 11, the interactive arm of Cable News Network Financial Network (CNNfn) published a feature discussing the options and pitfalls lesbian and gay couples face in their long-term financial planning, given the inability of gay couples to legally marry. In interviews with John Lewis, marketing manager for MetLife Securities, Inc., Tom Swift, vice president of the Horton Investment Advisory Group, and Jeffrey Newman, president and chief operating officer of the Gay Financial Network, CNNfn staff writer Shelly K. Schwartz explores the options available to same-sex couples in protecting their assets and long-term financial security.

Among the suggestions offered by these financial experts: recognize that you'll need to place added emphasis on retirement savings; make sure you and your partner have a life insurance policy and that you've named each other as the beneficiary; and make sure you are both protected through durable powers of attorney, health care powers of attorney, wills and trusts, and other ways to construct strong legal bonds between partners.

Mainstream media stories dealing comprehensively with financial planning issues for the lesbian and gay community are rare. Please thank CNNfn for this vital and informative feature.

MTV Fights for Education and Acceptance

On Oct. 3, MTV premiered a public service announcement (PSA) produced by the Gay, Lesbian, and Straight Education Network (GLSEN). The PSA, which begins with screen text reading "Fighting Words," shifts to a series of young men menacingly approaching the screen, shouting "That's so gay!", "Fag!", "You're a queer, aren't you?", "Queer!" and "Faggot!" The camera shifts to Judy Shepard, standing in a classroom. "The next time you say these things," she implores, "think about what they really mean." The screen then shows a picture of Matthew Shepard, followed by the words "Murdered Because He Was Gay," and closing with the simple words, "End Hate."

The PSA, adopted by MTV as part of its ongoing "Fight For Your Rights: Take a Stand Against Violence"

Becoming Ourselves:

Intrapersonals

By Shawn Mooney

One lonely night not long ago, I arranged a date—at the last minute and against my better judgment. As I waited for him to arrive, I tidied up my living room, illuminated it with candles, lit incense, and cranked Ella on the stereo. Sitting with one eye cocked out the window for my gentleman caller, I sank into the comfort of my neat, soft-lit, aromatic and ambient living space. Wow, I thought, I feel fabulous. I wondered, why do I create a soothing atmosphere only when expecting to entertain another man? Hmm...

My ruminations on the question could have been self-critical, but—drenched as I was in Ella and incense—I reflected from a deeper place, watching less and less for my date's arrival. Eventually, I realized he was not showing, that I'd been stood up. Uncharacteristically serene, I viewed this as a message from the universe: I enjoyed my own space for the rest of the evening, dreamily content.

I had stumbled into my first date with the Boyfriend Within.

In a new book, Finding The Boyfriend Within: A Practical Guide for Tapping Into Your Own Source of Love, Happiness and Respect, Brad Gooch calls on gay men to balance our quest for sex and/or romance with an inner fund of love and nurturing. He calls this intrapsychic source the Boyfriend Within. Ultimately, Gooch challenges us to stop using sex and love as distraction; wholeness comes by treating ourselves the way we yearn some Mr. Right would treat us.

Finding The Boyfriend Within is a good introduction to the queer voyage of self-discovery and inner lovingkindness. I was, however, sometimes annoyed by the author's off-hand tone; Gooch seems almost embarrassed to be advocating such a deep relationship with the self, overcompensating with superficial asides and repartee. Nonetheless, the clarion call—to romance ourselves from the inside out—is crucial.

As we develop a relationship with this inner boyfriend, we sort through the baggage that can wreak havoc in our interpersonal lives. Realizing that no one else but me completes myself, I begin to approach my dating life more holistically, stop expecting the men in my life to meet needs that can only be satisfied within.

So, how do you contact this inner lover? Gooch provides a series of awareness exercises, inventories to help you take stock of your own stuff. Then he advocates an ongoing written Q&A with your Boyfriend Within. This may sound corny, but I urge you to give it a try. (Besides, think of the crazy things we do in pursuit of outer boyfriends.) As you begin to take responsibility for what might be screwing up or stalling your love life, dialogue on paper with the inside beau about it. Write your questions down and let him answer. You'll be surprised at what spills onto the page when you open to his voice. (Don't force his responses, just let them flow—this may involve pausing between sides of the conversation as you wait to 'hear' him.)

I recently began this dialogue with my Boyfriend Within in my journal, and the effect has been profound: when screwed up in my personal life, I now appeal to this inner beau—the part of me that encapsulates qualities I seek out in boyfriends. Feeling out of sorts about this or that guy in my life as I begin the conversation, soon that inner voice calms me down, helps me own the projections and move through or at least accept the confusion.

Who is this Boyfriend Within? As Gooch points out, he is that side of your self that manifests your deepest yearnings. Mine is turning out to be a sexy, no-nonsense dude who calls me on my shit, soothes me when I'm genuinely distressed and nudges my heart open when I would just as soon shut down and protect myself. He seems to be part Gestalt therapist and part trickster—a cross between Fritz Perls and Peter Pan. That's my man. Your Inner Boyfriend will be idiosyncratically yours.

We gay men need each other—erotically, emotionally and spiritually. The more we accept and love ourselves, the richer our commingling. A quote by someone named Rannie (hanging on the wall at A Flash Of Insight on Whyte) says it best: The arithmetic of love is unique: two halves don't make a whole—two wholes make a whole.

It represents an extraordinary opportunity to reach out to the very youth targeted by messages saying it's alright to discriminate and harass lesbian and gay men. The PSA shows in no uncertain terms the harm wrought on real people by such hateful words. MTV is to be applauded for this important contribution to the education of all our youth.

Among this group are several out lesbians and gay men, including National Gay and Lesbian Task Force (NGLTF) Policy Institute Director Urvashi Vaid, Award winning journalist and "Ms. Magazine" contributing editor Helen Zia, East West Players Producing Director Tim Dang, "Amerasia Journal" and "Asian American Sexualities" editor Russell

Leong and former supermodel Jenny Shimizu.

While some profiles don't mention sexual orientation, the magazine does not shy away from it either. In her profile, Shimizu told A. Magazine, "...people still come up and tell me how my being Asian American, gay and in the spotlight helped them identify with someone."

Many publications have ignored the lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender community in their year-, decade- or century-in-review issues, but A. Magazine demonstrates the rich diversity of our community by profiling these outstanding individuals who have made significant contributions over the last ten years. Please congratulate A. Magazine for letting the lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender community be part of its celebration.

Exploring Internet Hate on Jenny Jones

On Oct. 4, The Jenny Jones Show took an hour-long look at hate on the Internet. One of the segments focused attention on the "God Hates Fags" web site developed by Fred Phelps of the Westboro Baptist Church, and featured two members of the Phelps family.

Hate on the Internet is a very important issue, and Jones deserves thanks for exposing her audience to the impact of such unregulated hate speech on all minorities - racial, ethnic, religious and sexual. However, as good a job as Jones and her audience did in exposing the hatred and prejudice of the Phelps family, it is disconcerting that they were given the forum to spread their anti-gay rhetoric in the first place. Internet hate can and should be covered without giving a prominent platform to homophobic rhetoric such as that of the Phelps family.

Please write to The Jenny Jones Show. Commend her for teaching her audience about the impact of hate speech on the Internet, and explain that such education does not require that she provide a platform for the spreading of the very hatred she condemns.

JUST FRIENDS

Box 1997: 24, 5'8", 135lb, black hair, brown eyes. I like listening to music, mostly alternative and punk. I'm a hockey and football fan and I like to hang out. Not into the scene and I have no gay friends. I'm on the system looking for someone to talk to and hang out with. Start off as just friends and if other things develop then great, if not, well that's good too.

Box 2063: Fairly new to the city, currently have a boyfriend. Late 20's, he's early 30's. I'm a big boy, he's a little boy. We're like Fred Flintstone and Barney Rubble. We're looking for other couples or singles to get together and have some fun with, maybe go out to the bar. We're not too familiar with the area and just looking for fun.

Box 2130: 20, sexy, good looking, hazel eyes, 6'3", 140lb, nice person, I'd like to find someone who can do lots of things: downhill skiing, go out dancing, talk about Madonna if they want to, do the fun casual things that friends do.

LONG TERM RELATIONSHIPS

Box 1923: Dave, 18, student, looking to meet someone who knows how to treat their significant others. I enjoy snowboarding, listening to music, mostly punk and having fun. I like to go the bar, I like raving. I'm pretty easy going. Under 25 please.

Box 1947: Placed this ad to find Mr. Right, someone to be monogamous, settle down into a one-on-one relationship. Early 40's and think it's time for me to find someone to settle down with. Sincere, honest, not into the bar scene, just want to find a decent gay male out there who wants a long term relationship.

Box 1958: Single, 32, sensitive male, slim, smooth, 140lb, brown hair and eyes, about 5'10". Looking for a long term relationship with the right guy someone under 35. Things I don't like are: druggies, alch's, head games and liars. Things that interest me are the outdoors, camping, dancing, computers, reading. Staying home with the boyfriend would be nice.

Box 1977: I believe all races and religions are unique and should be respected. I like music, dance, art, nature, walks, wine, quality food, travel, yoga, other cultures and people, of course. I dislike smoke, drugs, bitchiness and intolerance. I'm an easy-going but responsible guy. Brown skinned, with a pleasant personality. I'm sincerely looking for a soul mate. If you're looking for a one night stand or phone-sex, don't waste time. Peace.

Box 2070: 21, white male, blond hair, blue eyes interested in a long term relationship. I live out of town, so encounters will include travel. I'm interested in guys around my own age, 18-25.

Box 2117: Here's the stats: I'm 32, not too shabby looking, professionally employed. I consider myself a masculine yet sensitive. I have old fashion values like honesty, loyalty and commitment. I'm interested in meeting people around my own age, are down to earth, and share common values. I'm looking for friendship and possibly more.

Box 2123: Simon, 19, gay, white male. I'm looking for friends or Mr. Right, I'm starting to believe he's not out there. Not that really I believe that everyone has an individual that's ideal for them, but if there's anything that's relatively close I wouldn't mind finding him. I like to do the usual, I'm basically just trying to find someone, getting out of the bar scene. Getting sick of it and would like something different in my life.

Box 2126: Grant, looking for a long term relationship. I stand 6'1", 140-150lb, dark hair and eyes, and I'm very trendy. I would say. I'm just looking for another gay male. 24 years old.

CASUAL ENCOUNTERS

Box 1928: 38 year old straight looking and acting male, financially and emotionally secure. 6', 190lb, broad shoulders, considered very good-looking. Looking for other emotionally mature, good looking guys. In good shape.

Box 1939: Trev. I don't know what to say or how to say it. All I know is fall's around the corner and I'm looking to meet up with someone who's warm and likes to snuggle. If you're interested in doing all sorts of different things and sitting by a nice warm fireplace and drinking wine, give me a call. I'm blond, 6'1", medium build, tall, told I'm quite nice to look at.

Box 1951: Hot, 20, Spanish-Lebanese guy, looking for other guys to talk to and get-together with.

Box 1999: Mid-30's white male, interested in meeting older guys, 50+ for oral service. Reciprocity is not necessary.

Box 2013: Looking for any hot young guys 22 and under that want to get together on a casual basis, maybe more. 5'11", 160lb, slim build, looking for a good time.

Box 2046: Greg, very horny 40 year old bottom, 5'8", 150lb, shoulder-length, light brown hair. Hazel green eyes, mustache, tanned body, smooth body and chest, and a smooth, round fuckable ass. 6 1/2 uncult, shaved cock and balls, shaved hole. I loved sucking, getting sucked, loved getting sucked, and a few other possibilities.

Box 2059: 37, 8 inches and thick very big dick. I'm looking for university students, high school guys over 18 years old, and especially if you're an Oriental guy, Filipino boy or a Black guy who has a very toned body, small waist and very smooth chest. I live on the south side, can entertain.

Box 2090: Richard, young 52 year old, married, 5'10", 180lb, 6-1/2' out, keep fit, nice guy with a great sense of humour. Really heavy into masturbation while watching video's or magazines. I'd like to get together with a younger male to share these experiences. I can perform oral and would be a good teacher if you so desire. Discretion is a must and I cannot entertain.

Box 2095: Bisexual 23, very hot, and looking to have a good time.

Box 2131: Tall, sexy, good-looking 20 year old, hazel eyes, 6'3", 140lb, love Madonna, love horses and cats. I like going places and seeing new sights around the city, doing new stuff, experimenting, going out dancing. I like fashion and make-up. I drink casually.

LEATHER & SM

Box 2051: Dominant guy, new in town, looking for a fellow who needs hard-core training. Prefer someone who's well built and in shape, but I also coach physical training. You're between 25-35 and looking for more than a one night stand. Seasoned or beginners, ok. 37, 5'11", 155lb, swimmers build, muscular, ex-military triathlon athlete. Safe and comfortable and very sane. I'm an experienced no-nonsense master, I've owned and trained 24/7 slaves before. This could be the beginning of a wild adventure for both of us.

BEARS, BIG MEN & THEIR ADMIRERS

Box 2037: Husky, horny, safe, clean, discreet bear wanting to meet other bears or their admirers. Hinton area. 240lb plus, at least and hairy.

Box 2038: Male looking for young male between 18-23 years old, someone I can spoil, if you're interested in a chubby, husky gay male, get back.

TRANSGENDER

Box 1949: Chantal, 28, 5'9", 145lb, long, curly, brown hair, blue/green eyes looking for an open-minded and understanding gentleman while I'm in town. I work out of town a lot.

Box 1976: Late 30's TV, love to dress very slutty, high heels, lingerie, holes, sexy outfits, a lot of make-up.

long nails. And when I dress like that I like to perform like a slut. My birthday is week before Halloween and I'm looking for is to organize a party, and orgy with a bunch of TV's, cross-dressers and males, females, couples, anyone who enjoys a transgendered lifestyle. I'm also looking for a male to take me to the Roost or Flashbacks on Halloween.

Box 2015: 24 year old cross dresser is looking for someone to have a wonderful time with this evening. I'm not passable, 6', 190lb, looking for a great time. Willing to do and try anything. Willing to be your little girl.

Box 2020: Jacqueline, transsexual, 5'4", petite, brownish/blond hair, brown eyes, 130lb, considered attractive, just looking to meet some muscular well-hung men out there who are into transsexuals.

Box 2024: David, quite healthy and happy, living in the West Edmonton area and what would make my life even better is if I had a gentleman that would pay me visits. I have chosen this section because of my physical make-up. This is a discreet side of my personality at my private home, so you would be chosen very carefully, for discretion is a must.

Box 2026: Scott, 34, bi-curious, 5'2", 115lb, brown hair, hazel eyes, what I'm looking for my first experience is a transsexual, transvestite or very passable cross-dresser for some fun and good-times.

Box 2091: Jay, 29, married, bi cross-dresser, submissive. Looking for a dominant transvestite, transsexual or male to have some fun with during the day or week. I like to dress up and have a good time.
